

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

As far back as 1856 a resolution was introduced in Phi Alpha relative to the compiling of a catalogue of the society. In January, 1858, a committee of three was appointed, which in the following April reported that "nothing had been done," and then, so far as the records show, quietly winked out. Since then catalogues have several times been proposed, but never made. The historical address of Mr. A. A. Paxson, '68, at the reunion of 1870 was chiefly biographical and very interesting, but, of course, very incomplete. The sketch of Mr. C. H. Dummer, '76, read at the fortieth anniversary in September, 1885, treated more of the growth and character of the society, but, unfortunately, not being printed it was lost. In the following November a committee was appointed and empowered to prepare a catalogue of the society and of the library. This committee consisted of Messrs. W. D. Wood, '72, A. L. Stevens, '84, and H. M. Wilson, Edward Capps, and T. W. Smith of '87. Mr. Stevens carefully rearranged the library and prepared a card catalogue, but it was not thought advisable to publish a list of the books. The rest of the committee early in 1886 began the work of collecting information for the biographical sketches and continued with some interruptions until the fall of 1888, having by that time written many of the sketches. In the spring of 1889 it was determined to complete the work, and, as the members of the committee had mostly left Jacksonville, the committee was reorganized as follows: T. W. Smith, '87, F. W. Sanford, '90, J. A. Capps, '91, and P. H. Epler, '92. Last fall Messrs. Frank Read, jr., '88, C. A. Rowe, '89, H. M. Capps, '90, and R. F. Lenington, '91, were added. Thus constituted the committee has with the recent assistance of Mr. W. D. Wood, '72, and Edward Capps, '87, brought the work so far that, although much more could be done, it has been thought best to publish it in time for the reunion. In now submitting this catalogue to the society the committee gives the following words of explanation:

The sketch of Phi Alpha is far from historically complete. The loss of the records covering the years from 1845 to 1853 makes the treatment of that, the most interesting period, vague and unsatisfactory. Nor of the years since then has the writer tried to give a detailed and connected narrative that would tell of all the growth and changes in the society and of the work of its members. That must be an undertaking of greater length and preparation than has here been possible and some suggest that the society have such a history ready at its fiftieth anniversary. The writer of the following sketch has endeavored merely to show the improvement in Phi Alpha's circumstances and position and to trace her most cherished features and characteristics. And although he has not attempted even to name the men who have been prominent in the society's history and who are its history, still it is hoped that this sketch will make clearer to us all the outlines of a favorite picture and at least furnish some hints to the future historian.

The biographical sketches are arranged in the order in which the members signed the constitution. Since a few may have neglected to sign the constitution and even the lists of those who did sign have been imperfectly transmitted, it is possible that two or three names have been omitted. If the sketches themselves seem dry and colorless to some, let them remember the limitations of the committee. We have prepared the following sketches in the belief that even brief accounts, the main facts and dates, will not be without interest to those who were contemporaries in Phi Alpha and since college days have lost track of one another. As to eulogy the committee have thought best to follow the old Latin precept slightly changed, nihil bonum nisi de mortuis, and we are sure the society will see the wisdom of this rule. Of many of the members we could get no trace and the information sent by many others was very meager and often inaccurate. But the committee feel that, on the whole, as we refrain here from making any complaint, so also we shall need make no apology. We have not been able to learn the order of the presidents and secretaries of the first eight years nor all the honors taken by the early graduates. Although the catalogue has dragged its weary length through four years, yet we can say that the sketches and the addresses are with few exceptions up to date.

We must add, in conclusion, that we trust this edition will be only the basis for a richer and more complete one to be issued nine or twelve years hence. Therefore we strongly urge that any reader of the following pages, be he a member or friend of a member, so soon as he notes any mistakes or omissions, shall immediately write them down and send them to Mr. Harry M. Capps, '90, of this city. These will be carefully kept and used in the next edition.

Respectfully,

THE PHI ALPHA CATALOGUE COMMITTEE.

Jacksonville, Ill., June, 1890.

SKETCH OF PHI ALPHA.

ON the evening of 25 September, 1845, there met in the dormitory of Illinois College a company of seven students for the purpose of organizing a literary society. The "immortal seven" were: Florence E. Baldwin, Greenbury R. Henry, William Jayne, Henry S. Van Eaton, Robert Wilkinson, Robert D. Wilson, and Nehemiah Wright. Messrs. Henry and Wright were the earliest and most enthusiastic promoters of the movement, and the first meeting was called in Henry's room in the northeast corner, third story, of the old dormitory, which was burned in 1852. On the first page of the society's records appears the following: "At a meeting of students of Illinois College for the purpose of organizing a literary society held on Thursday evening, 25 September, 1845, Mr. Henry was called to the chair. Messrs. Baldwin, Jayne, and Wright were appointed a committee to draft a constitution, to be presented at the next meeting. Mr. Van Eaton was appointed to address the meeting, portraying the objects of the formation of the society. Adjourned to Tuesday evening, September 30." At the meeting on the evening of September 30 the constitution was presented and adopted. Phi Alpha society was the name chosen for the new organization, taken from the initial letters of the Greek words Φίλοι Ἀληθείας—Lovers of Truth. The admirable and lucid statements of the constitution itself carry their own interpretation and need no comment.

"Art. I. This society shall be called the Phi Alpha society, and its motto shall be 'Onward and Upward.'

Art. II. The objects of this society shall be the attainment of truth and the literary improvement of its members."

Sigma Pi had been organized in Illinois College two years earlier and was in successful operation; but, as this society was somewhat fastidious in its qualifications for membership, there arose a feeling in favor of a society having a broader and more comprehensive basis, and the crystallization of this sentiment resulted in the founding of Phi Alpha. From the start it was democratic in constitution and tendency, and, remembering the battle it had to fight, we should not be surprised if it were radically and defiantly so. A student's political belief or religious creed or social standing or poverty or wealth did not debar him nor prevent his attaining a high position in Phi Alpha—and we believe this has been true ever since. Membership was based strictly upon the general merits of a student and his willingness to loyally coöperate in promoting the interests of the society. Nor were those of the lower classes or new students, who were strangers, in the slightest degree discriminated against. The task to which the seven resolute young men devoted themselves was not an easy one, and they had to fight their way to the recognition and respect which are reserved only for those that succeed. While they were still regarded as revolutionists and before they had time or opportunity to make their enterprise a success, the growth in membership was not large, but was sufficient to indicate progress. More important was the fact that the new members were imbued with the spirit of the society and with devotion to its aims. A letter recently received from one of the founders reveals the nature of the contest that had to be waged. He says: "We felt that there was an outside element of good fellows, who ought to be united. We might not be as pious as others; we did not claim, as they did, any great amount of intellect and culture; still, we hoped we had some, and finally determined to band ourselves together and have a society of our own, and so Phi Alpha was organized. We were at once met with scorn and contempt and for years we had a hard time. It was in reality the old fight, that of the exclusives against the liberals; and, having good fellows and sensible on our side, well endowed with resolute determination, we succeeded, as in modern times always happens in such a contest. The success of dear old Phi Alpha has surprised us old fellows, so cognizant of our early struggles, and has pleased and gratified and still gratifies us more than we can well express." One of the early members writes as follows: "I do not suppose that the faculty of those days would have allowed that there was any bias against Phi Alpha; but there was a feeling in the society that such a bias existed, and some Phi Alphas had an especial scorn for so-called 'faculty pets,' of which the number in their society was not supposed to be large, and a certain pride of consistency in receiving reproof for transgressions, when others escaped by concealment or deception."

How long Phi Alpha was regarded as an upstart or intruder, we can not say; it certainly did not wait long for accessions. When in 1849-50 nine joined Sigma Pi, twenty-five cast their lot with Phi Alpha; and from then on the "Phis" so evenly divided the numbers and the honors with the "Sigs" that the latter must soon have ceased to question whether the younger society had a destiny. It is true that before the war and during the war the political sentiments of the "Phis" were often unsavory to the faculty, but the instructors surely respected the ability and sincerity in the society. In the minutes of the fifth annual reunion, which was held on 16 June, 1858, we read: "President Sturtevant being present was called upon and gave us some counsel and suggestions, saying that he was favorably inclined towards our society as toward the other and wishing us prosperity and success. * * * Dr. Adams was then called upon and responded in a short but telling speech." As to numbers, the following academic year, indeed, saw the high-water mark in the history of Phi Alpha; for forty new men signed the constitution. The smallest yearly accession was that of 1866, when only five joined. In 1868 seven were taken in and in 1878, only six. The society opened in 1881 with seven active members, called "the famous heptade" to distinguish them from "the immortal seven." Since then the active membership has ranged between thirty and forty, the present number being thirty-five. But, like Gideon's army, Phi Alpha never found its strength merely in numbers and it never will.

The debate was from the first the chief feature of the meetings. This was done designedly, for the members early had large faith in free and open discussion as an aid to finding out the truth, and although the general drift of circumstances both in and out of the society naturally gave prominence to the debate, still it is doubtful whether it would have been the main feature that it has been for the forty-five years had it not been for the guidance and impulse given it by the founders. Notwithstanding the majority of these were in sympathy with the views of the whig party as it existed in 1845, there was no such preponderance as to silence or intimidate in the discussion of political questions any democratic tongue in the hall. On the other hand, when in the '50's the influx into the college of men from Kentucky, Missouri, and southern Illinois was large enough to change the political hue of Phi Alpha, there still were heard some very plain words on squatter sovereignty or the Dred Scott decision. The time has never been when any questions of general interest were unpopular or unfashionable, or when the fear of disturbing harmony or of cooling friendly relations has restrained free speech. It is not without feelings of pride that old members have referred to this characteristic, and to the related one, that the discussions have invariably been two-sided. It goes without saying that many of the debates have been heated and even acrimonious; but, if any bad spirits were engendered, they have fled from the hall upon adjournment, and as the debaters trooped down College hill they have disappeared in the darkness.

The society never lacked for live subjects of discussion, and yet there is a large class of questions as to which no Phi Alpha generation has rested in the decisions of former generations. Among these are: whether the course of the United States in the Mexican war can be justified, whether foreign missions or commerce has done the more for civilization, whether the French Revolution aided the cause of liberty, whether Napoleon did more good than harm, whether the execution of Charles I. was justifiable, whether the rate of interest should be fixed by law, or whether the signs of the times indicate the approach of a universal republic. These and a few others resemble Encke's comet. Each in making its regular appearance in Phi Alpha has a periodicity of about three and a half years. The decision in 1857, that the expression of political sentiments should be allowed at college exhibitions, was perfectly natural to Phi Alpha, and later, under circumstances that can easily be guessed, the question, "ought the claims of female society and the promptings of gallantry be recognized by this society as of greater importance than attendance upon its meetings," was discussed and decided in the negative. The first fifteen years of the society's existence were fruitful in political discussion and action of the most ardent kind, and the records show how eagerly and fiercely the most important questions were debated. Some of the controversies have since been settled in accordance with the decisions then foreshadowed, but others are perennial. As long ago as 1853 it was decided that "it would be policy for the United States to decrease her present tariff duties." In 1854 the members had grown more radical, for it was then decided that it would be better for the United States to have no protective duties on imported goods. This decision was reaffirmed in 1856 and again in 1860. Upon another issue that is still alive and momentous the society early put itself on record, by deciding in June, 1855, that "our legislature acted wrong in referring our prohibition law to the people."

All these decisions and the ones following are, of course, the decisions of the president as to the ability shown in the debate. The decision of the president does not always indicate the opinion of the society as a whole, because the society as a whole does not express itself on all questions. But concerning the great and vital subjects of the day that arouse every member we may generally take the decision on the ability as the judgment of the society. Keeping this in mind we see that already in 1854 there was felt in Phi Alpha, as in the whole country, the beginning of the end of "the irrepressible conflict. In January of that year the question, "has any individual of the United States a right to oppose on the plea of conscience any law which may be passed by his country," was decided in the affirmative. And the decision in the following March, "that congress should pass Judge Douglas' Nebraska bill," was somewhat in the same tenor, as this bill did not include the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, which the third Nebraska bill did. In the same year it was decided that "the tendencies to dissolve the Union are not more strong at present than those to perpetuate it," that "a state has not the right to secede," and later—Douglas' third Nebraska bill having been passed—that "the Missouri Compromise should not be restored." The scales were evenly balanced from now on to 1860. It was successfully maintained in April, 1856, that the course of President Pierce toward Kansas was not censurable, and in October the contention, that "the objects and aims of the republican party as set forth in their platform are more truly national than those of the democratic party as set forth in their platform," was lost, J. H. Wood leading on the affirmative and Wm. M. Springer on the negative. In 1858, although the course of Senator Douglas in regard to Kansas was thought to have been consistent, the correctness of the Dred Scott decision was denied. The decision in February, 1860, that congress did not have the right to prohibit slavery in the territories, was in September reversed. It was thought in January, 1861, that the policy of President Buchanan towards southern secession had not been correct and in February the opinion of 1854 was reversed and it was decided that the Missouri Compromise line should be restored and extended to the Pacific. The question chosen at the meeting of 5 April, 1861, and debated on 26 April, Fort Sumpter having been fired on in the interval, was, "Resolved, that the tendencies of the present times are not toward the preservation of human liberty," and it was decided in the negative. The president that occupied the chair and decided the question last named volunteered in an Illinois regiment soon after his graduation in June, 1861, and fought for four years in line with his decision.

The outbreak of the civil war found many "Phis" not only of fighting age but also possessed of the fighting spirit, many

"whose faith and truth
On War's red touchstone rang true metal."

Not unnaturally, however, they did not all fight on the same side ; but in the clash of arms all showed the same courage and the same loyalty to conviction that they before had manifested in the clash of opinions in the old hall. During the war there was a strong democratic element in the society, and, although the debates and decisions were not disloyal, they did not always uphold President Lincoln. There has since been a gradual change, and for the last decade at least the republicans have been predominant in Phi Alpha. In fact, many a son of an old "Sig," inheriting his father's politics, has found more congenial atmosphere on the ground floor. But this does not mean that democratic truths have had no defenders, nor weak defenders, nor that the discussions have lacked the fire which is struck when honest convictions meet, nor least of all that a student's political opinions have ever been a bar to membership or honors in Phi Alpha.

As stated above the first place of meeting was Mr. Henry's room in the old dormitory. Later, and for several years, the meetings were held in the northwest corner room on the second floor of what was then known as the chapel building, but which has recently been named "Beecher Hall." The same space is now occupied by a part of the college library. The room was used regularly as a recitation-room, and this fact alone attests the hardihood and devotion of the child Phi Alpha. How the "intra-mural exhalation" could survive from meeting to meeting we cannot conceive ; but in the minutes of 1855 we have a hint, as follows : "A motion was here made to fine several members for chewing tobacco. It was lost." In 1856, when the present chapel was finished, the society was called upon to choose for its permanent abode one of the two rooms in the old chapel. Let the records tell the story :

" Called Meeting of Phi Alpha Society, June 14, 1856.

The house having been called to order by the president, Mr. Bates stated the object of the meeting to be to choose between the upper and the lower rooms of the south end of the college chapel. Messrs. Bates, Bergen, and Burt were appointed to confer with the Sigma Pi and to act in conjunction with the committee appointed at the last regular meeting, to which committee Mr. G. H. English was added. The society decided by a vote of twelve to six in favor of the lower room. On motion society adjourned.

E. T. GEYER, rec. sec.,

per J. H. WOOD."

At the annual reunion during the commencement week that soon followed, the urgent need of money to fit up a hall for the society's use was stated, and more than one hundred dollars were pledged. The views of the old members present at the reunion coincided with those of active members, as indicated by their vote. Of one it is recorded that he "earnestly contended for the lower room, exhorting the committee to cling to it." The result of the contest, which was friendly but not without exciting interest, is shown in the subjoined agreement :

JACKSONVILLE, 19 June, 1856.

We, the undersigned, representing the Sigma Pi and Phi Alpha societies of Illinois College, have this day entered into an agreement that the Phi Alpha society shall have the first choice of the rooms given to the societies by the college, by paying into the treasury of the Sigma Pi society the sum of seventy-five dollars on or before the first day of October, 1856.

After choice had been made, the members gave liberally of their time and their money toward preparing the room for occupancy. It has been Phi Alpha's home ever since, and from time to time the members have added to its comfort and beauty; yet is it doubtful whether the sense of satisfaction and triumph that those felt who secured the hall and prepared it for use has since been equalled. Phi Alpha Hall is a place rich in old associations and memories, the most historic room perhaps in all the colleges of Illinois. In that room more than sixty years ago was organized Illinois College, the earliest in time and one of the highest in aim of all in the state whose name it bears. For a third of a century it has been Phi Alpha's home and in it have been enacted scenes that neither time nor distance nor the struggles of life have served to dim but which to old members are as vivid and real as though time has ceased to move.

The library which the founders early began to accumulate has always been the most valuable of Phi Alpha's tangible possessions. At the very first and for several years the leading magazines were subscribed for and then bound, but the growth in other books was necessarily slow. Mr. James W. Enghigh, '48, used to tell how one summer he as librarian took the whole library home in one wheelbarrow load and read it through. From 1850 on, according to the records, the donations of books and contributions of money were very generous. That the members, however, were not so self-centered as not to be interested in the efforts of others towards similar ends is shown by the last paragraph of the minutes of the regular meeting of 28 February, 1855, which runs as follows:

"The Phi Alpha society gave leave to present in its own name a copy of the Knickerbocker Gallery to the Phi Nu society of the Illinois Conference Female College. Messrs Geyer, Philbrick, and Hamilton were appointed a committee to do the work. On motion the society adjourned.

LYMAN LACY, rec. sec.

There is that scattereth and yet increaseth, for the librarian's report of June, 1857, showed 775 volumes on the shelves.

When lecture courses were paying enterprises—and, indeed, after they ceased to be—Phi Alpha secured men of national fame, not only for their lectures but also in the hope that funds might be obtained for the library's benefit. Many large and valuable additions were made from the profits of lectures and entertainments, and midway in the '50's the two societies found it necessary to make an agreement explicitly defining the powers of each in the matter of lecture courses with the intent to maintain profits and promote harmony. If early in the '60's they had agreed to let the platform severely alone, it would have been a fortunate decision; for lecture courses ceased to be profitable, and if the money required to pay deficits had been put into books both libraries would be larger. One of the earliest of this long series of losing ventures was, as good tradition tells us, a lecture by Abraham Lincoln in the winter of 1858-59. It must have been in the interval between the Lincoln-Douglas debates and the Cooper Institute speech of February 1859. Old members recall the contrast between the graceful form of Ephraim Dayton, the president of that year, and the tall, gawky figure of Lincoln, as they marched up the aisle of the old Congregational church on the square; Lincoln's jokes as he adjusted his spectacles, and his singular subject, the laws of mechanics and physics; and most vividly the outcome, fourteen dollars deficit. The following lines from the minutes of 12 February, 1869, have a somewhat pathetic ring: "A vote of thanks was passed for the deduction made by Mark Twain in the price of his lecture and for the gratuitous services of Senator Pomeroy." For many years most of the library additions have been made by annual appropriations, the society thus following the spirit, if not the letter, of the 16th article of the by-laws, which is: "Every member of this society shall pay at the commencement of each college year two dollars to the treasurer, to be expended in buying books and for no other purpose whatever." In 1887, however, Phi Alpha again after many years ventured jointly as one of three on a lecture course and since then the courses have been so increasingly successful that this year Phi Alpha's share of the profits was over one hundred and fifty dollars. To-day, not including many books laid aside as out of date or of doubtful value, the library contains about 1800 volumes of the best selection and promises to be an object of hearty and permanent interest.

The custom of having anniversary exercises of a literary character was inaugurated during the first commencement week following the founding of the society. Of the first anniversary one of the founders in a letter of recent date writes as follows: "The first annual address before our society was delivered in June, 1846, by Prof. Bateman, a graduate of Illinois College, then a resident of Missouri, afterwards Superintendent of Public Instruction in this state (Illinois), and now president of Knox College. In the fervor of youth and pride of our society's first appearance in public, I thought it the most eloquent address I had ever listened to. Yet I will add that to-day, with the calmness of age, I deliberately pronounce that in my judgment, after having heard the ablest and most distinguished orators of the past forty years in the pulpit, forum, and political meetings, I think both orator and society had a right to feel justified and proud before the public." For several years the experiment was tried of having literary exercises and a reunion every year, but later the former were held biennially and only the latter annually. The year 1866 marked the beginning of a new era in Phi Alpha anniversaries and reunions. From that time effort has been made to set for them a higher standard of excellence, to make them more than ever a prominent feature of commencement week, and to establish definite characteristics so that members might regularly expect certain exercises of a high order. On the afternoon of commencement day in that year the society's twenty-first anniversary was celebrated with John W. Ross as orator and William H. Barnes as poet, and it proved a successful inauguration of the new departure. The reunion and supper at the Dunlap House in the evening set the mark high for those that were to follow, and the same hotel has been the scene of all but two or three of the suppers since then. From 1866 to 1878 the reunions were held biennially, but in the latter year Phi Alpha joined in a tripartite agreement with Sigma Pi and the society of Alumni, whereby each in its turn holds triennial reunions. Wednesday of commencement week has come to be known as "society day," the afternoon being devoted to the public anniversary exercises with the oration and poem, and the evening to the reunion and supper.

On 25 September, 1885, the society held special exercises in honor of its fortieth anniversary, and in the evening a birthday feast was set in Phi Alpha hall in order to have an informal and genuine reunion of brothers amid scenes and associations dear to them all. The atmosphere proved so congenial and the reunion so delightful that at the general wish of past and active members the reunion of 1887 was also held there. Those who participated in it will always remember it as an evening of rare enjoyment. But the reunions of 1885 and 1887, so full of pleasure, were not without saddening reminders. At the former was announced the death of Dr. Henry, in whose room Phi Alpha was born and whose ardor remained uncooled amid the cares of a life remarkably busy and beneficent. His was the first death in the ranks of the founders, but it was followed a year later by that of Mr. Baldwin, the first alumnus of the society. Both were present at the supper of 1884, and many remember with what grace Mr. Baldwin presided and with what eloquence Dr. Henry spoke. Phi Alpha reunions have acquired a reputation for their good suppers, good cheer, and good speeches; but at the latest one they were more successfully combined than usual. It was a fitting close of an eventful day in the society's history. Indeed, if the fervor and enthusiasm of youth saw in the oration at the first anniversary merit that was confirmed by the calmer judgment of mature manhood, it is not less true that at the forty-second anniversary both old members and young heard with pride an oration that made the heart of every Phi beat quicker, one of the most up-lifting and at the same time distinctly literary addresses ever delivered even in Jacksonville.

We have referred to the prominence that from the first has been given in Phi Alpha to the debate. Changes have been made as the interests and usefulness of the society seemed to require. The literary part of the program has been lengthened by the addition first of a select reading, then of an oration, and within the last few years of an impromptu speaker, called the "extemporizer." And although the debate occupies a place relatively less important than formerly, still it remains the chief feature as of old. Phi Alpha's record in this matter illustrates one of its most prominent and valued characteristics, namely, its conservatism. A certain confidence in the traditions of the elders has made it slow to introduce changes unless they had been carefully considered and their real need seemed apparent. The society did, perhaps, overestimate its capacity in October, 1857, when it voted to meet every week instead of every other week; for the meetings became bi-weekly again in January, 1858. On the other hand the change of the day for meeting from Wednesday to Friday, which was made in January of 1861, and the institution of a critic in 1866 proved to be decidedly for the better. We can not say why, from 1857 to 1866, no chaplains were elected. Whether lack of material made this innovation necessary, whether the office was merged into some other, or whether in those dark days prayers were offered by the whole society, the records do not tell. Generally, however, a strong sentiment has prevailed in Phi Alpha against trying experiments, especially with the constitution or regarding the membership. In these respects the society has always shown a dread of being led or forced into a position that later might have to be abandoned. Certainly such a constitutional amendment as Sigma Pi passed in 1886 when it limited its membership to twenty-five, however beneficial it may prove to that society, would be looked upon in Phi Alpha as revolutionary and almost suicidal. But the progressive spirit has not been discouraged. This is seen in little changes as in the enlarged literary program above referred to, in the limiting of the debaters, with the exception of the leaders, to five and ten minutes, or in the setting aside of the last meeting in February as the annual "open" meeting. The manners and methods of Phi Alpha are bound to alter, to suit the tastes of new generations and the varying demands of Illinois College life. The old members can not expect anything else. Physiologists tell us that the component particles of the human body are all changed in the course of seven years. So with Phi Alpha, the active membership becomes entirely different after five or six years, and the appearance and manners must also change; but the identity, the ego, remains unchanged and unchangeable.

It is, in fact, fortunate that all tendencies in Phi Alpha have not been toward conservatism. The founders were by many considered fiery radicals of the extremest sort, and of the names given them by their contemporaries and rivals none indicated the dignity or reverence that the name conservative implies. When radicalism has been required, the members have been courageously radical, and "the enthusiasm of propagandists and the fire of crusaders" still exist among them; but they have learned that conservatism is also necessary in order to give effectiveness and permanence to their organization and its work. Both qualities have combined to give interest and continuity to the society's history. And this history has not been made by a few nor confined to a limited number of important events. Its making has been shared by all who have been interested participants in its struggles and victories during the forty-five years of its life. We do not seek here to recount this history, but only to give the outline of some of its chapters. Part of the history is written in the record books of the society, but most of it is written in the hearts and lives of the members.

For nearly fifty years the literary societies have been a marked feature of Illinois College, and it is not too much to say that, as student organizations accomplishing literary ends, their superior does not exist in the west. Rivalry has always existed between them and not infrequently it has been sharp and even bitter. At the beginning of each year new members must be had and good ones. This has sometimes led to underhand solicitations, sorry misrepresentations, and the dark work of the whippers-in. Some 'lovers of truth' and others whose motto is 'let there be light' might well blush, if they could not plead the natural ardor of youth. It can be said to the credit of Phi Alpha that of late years the methods have at least been above-board. The active member, who is in the midst of the struggle, can not understand one of '53 who writes: "There are many other men that come to mind; but, as the years pass, the lines that society rivalries drew so sharply fade so that I hesitate to affirm with absolute positiveness to which society each man belonged." Each generation has played its practical jokes. More than once has Phi Alpha sent a committee to investigate the stamping up stairs; more than once during a special meeting has Phi Alpha's gas been turned off; but only once did the whole society troop down to the Methodist College to attend an open meeting of the Phi Nu, find themselves ushered into cold and dark parlors, and learn that the invitation was 'bogus.' In the main, however, there has been only a generous and healthy competition and the result has been to promote society spirit and to secure the chief benefit of both open and secret societies without the serious disadvantages of either. Those who know some of the good qualities of secret fraternities may be glad to hear that of late there is to be seen in Phi Alpha a disposition on the part of old members to 'coach' younger ones in their studies, writing, and speaking. It is not proposed to discuss the value of secret societies or their evils, but it may be asserted with confidence that the tone of college and society life at 'Old Illinois' is more healthful under present society relations than it would be if secret societies existed. That Phi Alpha has been the chief factor in bringing about existing conditions is as capable of demonstration as a proposition in geometry. Its career has proved that such an organization of students can be liberal and democratic and still not be deficient in those qualities of good fellowship and fraternity that give a charm to more compact and exclusive societies. Phi Alpha has always been notably free from manifestations of a narrow or inquisitorial spirit toward any student of the college that has honestly sought to share its burdens and its benefits. As a natural consequence membership has sometimes been bestowed upon those who were unworthy of it, or at least proved unwilling to faithfully assume its responsibilities. Experience has shown that a few members of this sort sometimes exert a demoralizing influence upon the whole society. To suggest the disease has been to suggest the cure, however, and the renewed zeal and increased diligence of the most loyal members have furnished the remedy. To prevent the possible election of men whose names are hastily and unadvisedly proposed, the society in 1885 changed the method of voting from viva voce to ballot box. But there has been no need to resort to measures of doubtful efficacy that were not in line with Phi Alpha's history and traditions. The broad underlying principles on which the society is based have never been abandoned and the loyalty to them has not been merely respect for them as custom, although that feeling has not been wanting, but a firm belief in them as governing principles of action.

It is not intended in this brief sketch to go into details, narrate many of the events, or even mention the names that have been prominent in Phi Alpha's history. Indeed, it would be impossible, with unlimited time and space, to group the facts so effectively, to picture the scenes so vividly as to make them satisfactory to those who were the actors. The story of the selection of the society's hall, even if amplified to the minutest point, would still be dull and commonplace to those who fought and 'bled' and conquered. Any account of the joint discussion of 1869 would seem tame enough to those who felt the thrill of joy and joined the shout of triumph following the announcement that—against great odds—the 'Phis' had won. The excitement that centered about the election of president in 1870 and again in 1872 and 1878 can not be told, nor the situation of the fall of 1881, when the society opened with seven against Sigma Pi's thirty, nor a hundred other scenes and battles. Yet the fact that much of the history must remain unwritten does not detract from its value or make it a less important element in determining the course and shaping the policy of the society. Taken as a whole that history is an unwritten code, whose binding force has always been recognized, not in detail or literally as that of the written constitution, but in spirit and purpose. An indomitable earnestness in the present members shows that the history of the past is strongly felt and that the men of '90, though widely separated from the founders and early members in point of time, yet are sharers with them of that history and are firm defenders of the faith. According to our motto future members must widen and deepen the power of Phi Alpha. But they will also recognize that certain principles are fundamental and essential and can not be surrendered without disaster.

As we sit and think of the forty-five years gone, one after the other the dear old faces come up before the inward eye. We see them again, the old smile and the same gesture; we recognize the tones of voice, the favorite expressions, the mannerisms—all dear to us now. And there rises before us, perhaps, the severe little recitation room dimly lighted by the oil lamp; and we see the knit brows and the earnest manner and hear the, "No, sir, Mr. President, the leader on the affirmative can not prove it," or the "I should like to ask the gentleman a question." Or it may be that the benches of the recitation room turn into chairs, the walls fall back and a spacious room appears; and in the brighter light we see in front the president's desk and in the center side by side two old light-blue pillars bulky and unbending. We see the beginner walk timidly to the front and read from his trembling notes; or we see the old member lean at ease upon the table and hear his confident "Now, Mr. President;" or we seem ourselves to be standing in front and marshalling out everything on our side of the question; we listen anxiously as the president 'sums up'—the other side wins. Things fade before us. We look again. A stranger is in the chair; the hall is brilliant with chandeliers and curtains and carpet ; one side of the room is entirely lined with books ; but where are the old pillars in the center ? Supplanted by a slender iron one. Is this Phi Alpha hall ? That painting over the president's head—with its deep perspective of letters carrying one back to nowhere—somehow that is familiar. But wait. Can that stripling read an essay ? Yes—pretty good. Wrote the same things ourselves once. 'Orator.' What, that boy ? Somehow that subject is not strange. Well done. This is something like Phi Alpha after all. 'The debate is next in order'—familiar words. What—that question ? We settled that when we were in college, years ago. That is right, define the issue. Assumes too much does he ? Yes, make him give his authority. Concede him that point ? Yes, you can afford to be fair What, so earnest over these dry bones ? So dauntless with these big problems ? Why, this is still Phi Alpha ! The voices grow fainter and fainter, the hall dimmer and dimmer, . . . and now they are gone. But the earnestness, the dauntlessness, and the fairness—these abide and must always abide, brothers of Phi Alpha, if our name is to have any meaning.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

1. William Jayne, b. 8 October, 1826, in Springfield, Ill. He prepared for college under private instructors in his native city, entered Illinois College in 1843 and was graduated in 1847 with the degree of B.A., afterwards receiving the degree of M.A. Mr. Jayne was one of the founders of Phi Alpha and was her first president. Having studied in the medical department of the Missouri State University for some time he received his diploma in 1849 and has since been a practitioner in Springfield. He married Julia Witherbee of Jacksonville, in October, 1850. They have five children. As a Republican Dr. Jayne has long been prominent in state politics. In 1860 he was elected state senator from the district composed of Morgan and Sangamon counties, and a year later by appointment from President Lincoln became governor of Dakota. He was also for a time delegate to Congress from that territory. In 1869 President Grant appointed him pension agent for Illinois. He has been mayor of his city four terms, 1859, 1876, 1877 and 1882, and for nine years was vice-president of the First National Bank of Springfield. As one of the three commissioners chosen by Governor Oglesby Dr. Jayne assisted in superintending the completion of the state capitol.

2. Florence Eugene Baldwin, b. 7 March, 1825, at Bethany, Wayne co., Penn. He came with his parents to Jacksonville, Ill., in 1837 and, after a common school education, entered McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill. After remaining there a short time he taught school for two years and then came to Illinois College in November, 1844. Mr. Baldwin was one of the founders of Phi Alpha and was the first recording secretary. He was graduated in 1846 with the degree of B.A., afterwards receiving the degree of M.A., and then studied law for one year in the office of Hon. Lyman Trumbull, Belleville, Ill. Shortly afterward he went to Boston and studied for a year in the office of A. and A. B. Merrill. In 1849 he went to California to seek his fortune but returned to Illinois in 1851. In the same year he married Elizabeth Wilkinson of Jacksonville, by whom he had eleven children. Removing to St. Anthony, Minn. in 1855, Mr. Baldwin settled on a farm near Clear Lake, Sherburne co. Four years later he was elected to the state senate and he also served several terms as county attorney. In 1872-78 he was in real estate and insurance business in Minneapolis, and in 1883 he removed to St. Cloud, Stearns co., where he lived until his death which occurred on 3 November, 1886. Mr. Baldwin had a generous heart and high aims. These, together with his ability in business, enabled him to acquire a good property and won him a high position in the state.

3. Henry Smith Van Eaton, b. 14 September, 1826, in Anderson township, Hamilton co., O. He came with his parents to Morgan county, Ill., in 1832 and entered the preparatory department of Illinois College in 1843. Mr. Van Eaton was one of the founders of Phi Alpha and held the offices of president and recording secretary. He was graduated in 1848 with the degree of B.A., and subsequently received the degree of M.A. Soon after graduation he removed to Woodville, Miss., and taught school till 1853. In 1853-54 he studied law with Judge Stanhope Posey and was admitted to the bar in 1855. He was elected states attorney for the southern district of Mississippi in 1857 and elected to the legislature in 1859. He entered the Confederate army as a private in 1862 and served till the close of the war. He was in the "Valley Campaign" of 1862 under "Stonewall" Jackson and in the campaigns and battles in front of Richmond that followed. In the second Manassas battle Mr. Van Eaton received several wounds. He was also in the battle of Fredericksburg and was afterward appointed field commissary with the rank of captain, and served as such in the campaigns of Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. He was then ordered to the Western army under Gen. Joseph E. Johnston and was assigned to duty as purchasing and forwarding commissary, in which position he continued till the close of the war, receiving his parole at Jackson, Miss., in May, 1865. Returning to Woodville he resumed practice in the latter part of that year. In 1880 he was appointed chancellor for the southern district of his state. Two years later he was elected to congress and served in the 48th and 49th. In 1887 he was appointed by President Cleveland a member of the board of visitors to the Naval Academy at Annapolis and the next year as one of a commission to examine and report upon the last completed portion of the Northern Pacific railroad. Mr. Van Eaton was married in 1859 to Anna L. Blount at Woodville. He is now practicing law and also has interests in cotton and stock raising.

4. Robert Wilkinson, b. 26 September, 1827, at Hopkinsville, Christian co., Ky. He moved to Illinois when very young, attended public schools, entered Illinois College in 1843 and was graduated in 1847 with the degree of B.A. and afterwards received the degree of M.A. Mr. Wilkinson was one of the founders of Phi Alpha and held the offices of recording secretary and president. Having studied law with Ira O. Wilkinson he was admitted to the bar at Rock Island, Ill., in 1849. Mr. Wilkinson has practiced law in Illinois and Colorado and for a number of years has been probate judge of Doniphan county, Kan. In the course of his residence in Colorado he was a member of the legislature and attorney for his county.

5. Greenbury Ridgely Henry, b. 21 September, 1828, in Hopkinsville, Christian co., Ky. In 1834 his parents removed to Bloomington, Ill. Mr. Henry attended Jubilee College, Peoria, Ill., in 1841 and 1842. He entered Illinois College in 1844 and was one of the charter members of Phi Alpha. He left college in 1847 without being graduated and in the same year began the study of medicine in the medical department of the University of Louisville, Ky., where he was graduated in March, 1849. He then remained in Louisville a year as the private pupil of Dr. Gross, the celebrated surgeon. In the spring of 1850 he went to Burlington, Ia., where he practiced his profession until his death. In the fall of 1851 he was married in Jacksonville, Ill., to Kate Chambers, daughter of Col. G. M. Chambers. They had six children, three of whom are dead. One of the latter, Robert L., attended Illinois College in 1885-86 and was a member of Phi Alpha. Dr. Henry died at his home on 14 May, 1885, after an illness of a few days. He was noted from his youth for his fearless truthfulness. His candor and frankness attracted to him friends who honored him till the day of his death. Aside from his superior professional qualifications he was a very liberal and energetic citizen, ready to invest his earnings in public enterprises and thus to aid the growth of his city. For several years he was a member of the city school board of Burlington and was also trustee of the Insane Hospital at Mount Pleasant, Ia.

6. Pike Clinton Ross, b. 6 July, 1825, at Lewiston, Fulton co., Ill. He attended Canton (Ill.) College in 1842-43 and Illinois College in 1845-46. Mr. Ross served in the Mexican war during 1846-47 as a member of the 4th Illinois regiment and took part in the battles of Vera Cruz and Cerro Gordo. In 1851-53 he studied medicine in the Ohio Medical College, Cincinnati, and practiced in Havana, Ill., during 1855-58. The next three years he spent at various places in the East and South for his health. Since 1861 he has engaged in the drug business in Canton, Ill. In 1866 he married Margaret Irwin of McDonough county, Ill. They have five children, two sons and three daughters.

7. Robert Davidson Wilson, b. 1 January, 1826, at Carmi, White co., Ill. He studied at home under a private tutor, attended college in St. Charles, Mo., for two years, entered the preparatory department of Illinois College in 1844 and left just before commencement in 1850. He studied law with his father, Judge Wm. Wilson, chief justice of the state supreme court, but did not practice. In 1854 he went across the plains to California, and in a month started back by steamer. After a day's voyage he was wrecked and upon being rescued was taken to San Francisco and has ever since made California his home. He taught school until 1862, then went into the stock business, dealing in cattle and horses. After pursuing this for a number of years he gave it up for real estate business. Since that time Mr. Wilson has either dealt in land or managed a farm for himself. He has been active in the interest of his adopted state from the time he was a member of the Sacramento county vigilance committee till the present. In 1873 he married an Illinois lady, who died several years afterwards. Mr. Wilson has no children of his own, but four step-children from his wife's first marriage. He is now living near Wallace, Calaveras co., Cal.

8. Nehemiah Wright, b. 20 February, 1824, at Holdeness (now Ashland), N. H. He attended preparatory schools in Plymouth, N. H., and Springfield, Ill., and in 1845 entered Illinois College. Mr. Wright was one of the founders of Phi Alpha and held the office of recording secretary. He left college in 1846 and subsequently taught school at Ashland and Petersburg, Ill., and Rumney, N. H. After studying medicine in 1847-48 with his father, Dr. Samuel Wright, he began to practice at Chatham, Ill. In 1849 Mr. Wright and Frances L. Huckins of Ashland, N. H., were married. They have a son and two daughters. Dr. Wright was a candidate for the legislature in 1856 and again in 1858. In January, 1865, Rush Medical College, Chicago, conferred on him the degree of M.D. and in 1872 he was elected county physician of Sangamon county. Illinois College gave him the degree of M.A. in 1878. Since 1885, when he was stricken with paralysis, Dr. Wright has not been active in his profession.

1846-47

9. Joseph Addison Barrett, b. in 1826 at Greenburg, Greene co., Ky. In 1835 he removed with his father to Sangamon county, Ill. He prepared for college under private instruction in Springfield, and entered the preparatory department of Illinois College in 1846. Mr. Barrett was in the institution one year, after which he attended the Missouri Medical College in St. Louis. He practiced in Taylorville, Ill., and in St. Louis county, Mo. In July, 1848, he married Helen M. Moore, daughter of a professor in McDowell Medical College of St. Louis. He died in March, 1868. His two children, a son and daughter, are living in St. Louis.

10. John Garven Clark, b. 31 July, 1825, near Jacksonville, Ill. He attended the schools of his neighborhood and later those of Missouri, where his family moved. After being in attendance at Marion College, Mo., for some time he entered Illinois College in 1845. He boarded himself while a student in the latter institution. He was graduated in 1847 with the degree of B.A., and during the succeeding year engaged in mining at Hazel Green, Wis. During the period of 1849-53 Mr. Clark was a government surveyor in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri. In the winter of 1850-51 he taught a school in Lancaster, Wis. He married in February, 1852, Minerva A. Pepper of that place, and has a son and daughter. Mr. Clark was appointed deputy clerk of the circuit court of Grant county, Wis., in 1853 and during that and the next year took some part in the formation of the Republican party. He was elected circuit clerk in 1854 and was twice his own successor in that office. In 1860 he was sent to the legislature. While a circuit clerk he had studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1861. When the war broke out he at once entered the military service. For a short time he was assistant commissary general of Wisconsin and then became first lieutenant and quartermaster in the fifth Wisconsin infantry and held those commissions until 1863, when he was appointed provost marshal of the third district of his state with the rank of captain. In February, 1865, he was commissioned colonel of the 50th Wisconsin infantry and served as such until mustered out in 1866. While colonel he was sent with his command to southwestern Missouri and thence north on the plains among the Sioux Indians. With his first regiment he participated in the battle of Williamsburg, in those around Richmond in 1862, and in those of Antietam and Fredericksburg. In 1867 he began the practice of law and has continued it ever since. Mr. Clark has held many local offices, school, town, city, and county.

11. Thaddeus Levi Loomis, b. 28 September, 1825, at Salisbury, Herkimer co., N. Y. His early education was received in the schools of Chesterfield, Ill. Mr. Loomis spent two years, 1845-47, in Illinois College, and was graduated from a law school in Louisville, Ky., in 1849. He has never practiced. From 1849 to 1854 his occupation was gold mining in California. Returning to Illinois he made his residence in Macoupin county. In 1854 he married Sarah A. Duckee of Chesterfield, by whom he is father of three sons and two daughters. Mr. Loomis served two terms as county judge in 1861-69. Of late years he has been active in developing the coal mining interests of his county and was chief mover in the building of Macoupin county's fine court house.

12. George Pierson, b. 10 May, 1826, at Cedarville, N. J. He removed to Jacksonville, Ill., in 1833, attended the public schools and in 1844 entered Illinois College, where he was graduated in 1848 with the degree of B.A., receiving later the degree of M.A. Mr. Pierson very soon after entered Andover Theological Seminary and was graduated in 1851. He was ordained a minister at Jacksonville the same year and soon after went as a missionary to the Choctaw Indians. Returning he studied medicine in Miami Medical College, Cincinnati, and Albany (N. Y.), Medical College, for two years. He then went as a missionary to Micronesia, in 1854, and in 1860 returned to this country. Since that time Mr. Pierson has been in charge of Presbyterian churches in the following places: Brooklyn, Cal., ten years; Adel, Ia., five years; Solomon City, Kan., eight years; and for the last five years in Henrietta, Tex. He was first married to Miss Salome Dexter at Augusta, Ill., in December, 1851. She died in 1852 and in 1854 Mr. Pierson married Miss N. A. Shaw at Unadilla, N. Y. He has two daughters and a son.

13. DeWitt Clinton Roberts, b. in 1829, in Winchester, Ill. He entered Illinois College in 1845, and left in 1847 on account of ill health. In 1850-51, he attended McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill. Since 1854 Mr. Roberts has been in the printing business, which is now his occupation in New Orleans, La.

14. James Walter Frazer, b. 28 July, 1826, near Independence, Autauga co., Ala. He moved to Arkansas when fourteen years old and attended the common schools of the country until his entrance into the preparatory department of Illinois College in November, 1844. He left in April, 1847, because of ill health. He studied medicine without a preceptor and in 1848-49 attended lectures in Louisville, Ky. In 1850 he practiced in Union County, Ark., and the same year married Margaret A. Wiley. In 1860 he received the degree of M.D. from the medical department of the Louisiana University, New Orleans. Dr. Frazer entered the Confederate service in 1862 as a surgeon in the hospitals and served till the close of the war. From then until 1887 he practiced medicine in Tupelo, Miss., at the same time carrying on a drug business. Removing then to Clarendon, Ark., he has there remained since as a physician and druggist, and has also engaged somewhat in farming. His wife died in 1887 and in 1888 he married Mrs. Lucy N. Youngblood. His property was swept away by the war, but he has since retrieved that misfortune.

15. Herman Engelbach, b. 22 December, 1829, at Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. After coming to America he settled in Illinois with his parents and attended common schools. He entered Illinois College in 1845, and was graduated in 1849 with the degree of B.A. After graduation he became a book-keeper in St. Louis and in 1852 went into milling and mercantile business at Arenzville, Cass co., Ill. In July, 1859, he married Elizabeth Goebel of that place. Mr. Engelbach was killed on 16 December, 1880, by being caught in the machinery of a grain elevator. He was a prominent member of the German Lutheran church and a man very much respected in his community.

16. George Bush Goudy, b. 27 January, 1828, in Indianapolis, Ind. His parents removed to Illinois in 1833, and resided at Vandalia, Jacksonville, and Springfield. He was in the preparatory department and pursued special studies in the college classes of Illinois College in 1844-45 and in 1846-47. He left Springfield in May, 1849, and in September went to Oregon City, Or., where he became publisher of "The Spectator," a weekly newspaper. He soon went to Lafayette, Or., and while there held the offices of county auditor and sheriff. In the summer of 1854 Mr. Goudy married Elizabeth Morgan of Lafayette. One child was born to them, now Mrs. L. J. G. Slocum of Chicago. In April, 1855, Mr. Goudy removed from Lafayette to Olympia, W. T., where he was unanimously elected public printer by the legislature. He there conducted "The Pioneer and Democrat," a weekly paper, and did the territory's public printing. He died in September, 1857. Mrs. Goudy now lives in Portland, Or. Mr. Goudy was a man of great industry and attained much personal popularity. He was one of the early pioneers of the Pacific coast and assisted in giving it a start in the course which has since developed that region.

17. Virgil Young Ralston, b. 16 July, 1828, at Vanceburg, Ky. His connection with Illinois College lasted a year, 1846-47, after which he studied law with Browning & Bushnell, of Quincy, Ill., and practiced there for several years. He also resided in California a short time. Mr. Ralston was editor of the "Quincy Whig" in 1855-57. In 1860 he was commissioned captain of a company in the 16th Illinois infantry, soon after resigned on account of ill health, but again enlisted in an Iowa regiment and served till sent to the hospital in St. Louis, where he died 19 April, 1864, from the effect of wounds and exposure.

18. Samuel Gregg Weagley, b. 6 January, 1826, in Lexington, Ky. After settling in Morgan county, Ill., he attended the common schools and in 1844 entered Illinois College, leaving two years later. He attended his first course of lectures in the medical department of Illinois College and a second course in the medical department of the University of Louisville, Ky. In 1849 Dr. Weagley married Amanda C. Layton of Morgan county. Since that year he has practiced in the same county, his home being at Orleans, and is now a member of the board of examining surgeons for pensions. He has three sons and two daughters.

19. James Worth English, b. 11 March, 1829, in Mason county, W. Va. In the spring of 1836 he removed with his father, Dr. Nathaniel English, a prominent physician, to St. Louis, and in December to Jacksonville, Ill., where he attended school. He entered Illinois College in 1844 and was graduated in 1848 with the degree of B.A., afterwards receiving the degree of M.A. He then studied law with Hon. Richard Yates and Judge William Brown and subsequently with Hon. David A. Smith. He was admitted to the bar in 1850, to the federal courts in 1860, and to the U. S. supreme court in 1873. Mr. English went to Carrollton, Ill., in 1856 and for three years held the office of states attorney for Greene county. In 1869 he was chosen delegate to the state constitutional convention, of which he proved to be a very efficient member, serving on the committees of revision and adjustment, finances, state institutions, and public buildings. During 1871-77 he resided in Leavenworth, Kan., after which he returned to Carrollton and continued in his profession. He was married in October, 1852, to Eliza Stryker of Jacksonville. Five of six children are living, two sons and three daughters, one daughter being dead. Mr. English died in Jacksonville on 15 August, 1888. He was a generous man, much beloved by all who knew him. His scholarship was shown by his love for Shakespeare, of whom he was an unusually good student. As a lawyer he was noted for his prudence and intelligence, for his faithfulness to clients and deference to the court. He was always an ardent lover of Phi Alpha.

20. Reuben Andrus, b. 29 January, 1824, in Rutland, Jefferson co., N. Y. At an early age he came with his parents to Fulton county, Ill., attended a private school and an academy in Canton, and in 1844 entered Illinois College. He was president of Phi Alpha one year. When entering the senior class in 1848 he was offered the principalship of the preparatory department in McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill., which he accepted. Pursuing studies at the same time he was graduated there in 1849. After graduation he organized and conducted a school called Greenfield Institute at Greenfield, Ill. In 1850 he took charge of the Decatur circuit and at the annual Methodist conference was admitted as a minister. In the fall of that year Mr. Andrus founded Illinois Wesleyan University and became principal of its preparatory department and at commencement was elected professor of mathematics. He was compelled to resign on account of failing health and next settled in Springfield, Ill., where he organized Central Academy. After having charge of churches at Beardstown and Decatur he was elected president of the Illinois Conference Female College at Jacksonville, but preferring the work of a minister he filled charges at Quincy, Beardstown, Springfield and Bloomington. He was temporary president of Quincy College in 1865, and in 1867 was transferred to the Indiana conference, being stationed at Evansville for three years. He subsequently for two years had charge of Meridian Street Church, Indianapolis, and then was elected president of Indiana Asbury University, which position he held during 1872-75. In 1877-80 he had charge of the Central Avenue Church in Indianapolis and the following year was stationed in Rushville, Ind. On account of failing health he took a European trip and after his return was placed in charge of a church at Franklin, Ind. His health failed gradually and he died at his home in Indianapolis 17 January, 1887. Mr. Andrus was twice married, first in 1849 to Emeline L. Van Pelt of Naples, Ill., who died in 1851, and in 1853 to Matilda Stamper of Decatur, Ill., who with a son and
